Abstract
During this seminar, Marylène Gagné will talk about the integration of three models (a model of work performance, a model of motivation, and a model of work design) to understand “thriving” in future work. The length of the seminar (90 minutes) provides possibilities for professor Gagné to expand on research evidence and future directions. It also involves the possibilities for a discussion.

Bio
Marylène Gagné is Professor at the Future of Work Institute at Curtin University in Perth, Australia. She has a PhD in psychology from the University of Rochester (NY, USA). The Institute promotes productive and meaningful work as essential foundations of a healthy economy and society, with a mission to support thriving people and organisations in the digital age. Marylène’s research examines how organisations, through their structures, cultures, rewards, tasks, and management, affect people’s motivational orientations towards their work, including volunteer work, and how quality of motivation influences performance and well-being in the workplace. She is past associate editor at the European Journal of Work and Organizational Psychology, and currently sits on several editorial boards of journals in psychology and management.
